Chandrapur Road, Panikhaiti, Guwahati-26, Assam, India

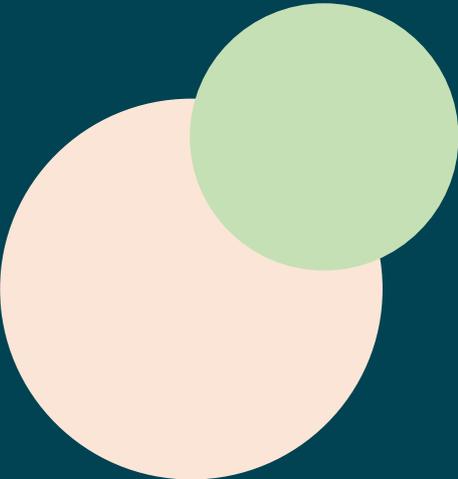

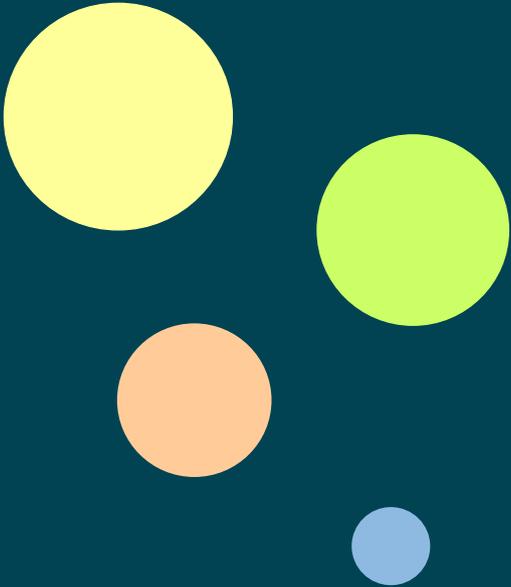

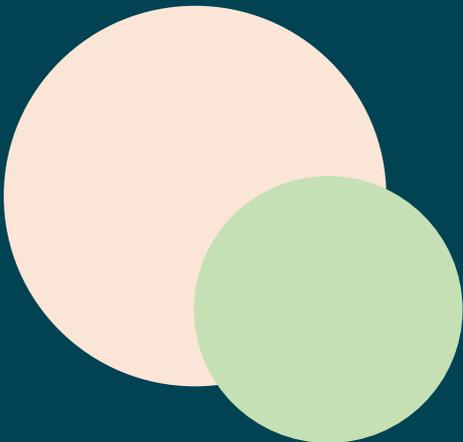

Quizzophrenic 1.0: The online general solo quiz competition was organized by Pratiksha Institute of Pharmaceutical Sciences (PIPS) under Pratiksha Educational Trust on 19th June 2020 for higher secondary students of Assam and the North-Eastern states. Due to the ongoing situation of COVID-19 the entire quiz programme was conducted through the Zoom app. Over twenty five students from various educational institutes across the state, participated in the quiz. The preliminary round of the quiz was conducted through Google forms in which the contestants had to answer a predetermined set of questions within the stipulated time of thirty minutes. From the prelims, ten participants were selected based on evaluation of their preliminary answers, for the mains that was conducted from 1 pm onwards. The quizmaster for the mains was Dr. Chandrajit Dohutia, a faculty member of PIPS. He was ably supported by another faculty, Mr. Anupam Sarma. The questions of the quiz covered various backgrounds and fields and ranged from history and geography to modern sciences, politics, mythology and current affairs. All the participants gave some brilliant answers and cracked some of the toughest questions. The participants enjoyed the quiz thoroughly. It was a truly unique quiz competition as this mode of digital quizzing has not been used by any institute of the State till date. After an immensely close and cutthroat competition, Geetanjali Das from KC Das Commerce College, Shreemoyee Chatterjee from Don Bosco School, Panbazaar and Jigyash Nath from St. Claret School secured the top three positions respectively and were awarded certificates and cash prizes. The rest of the finalists were also provided with appreciation certificates. PIPS has always focused on knowledge and learning for building a better world for everyone and will continue to do so in the near future under the guidance of their dynamic Principal and extremely helpful and supportive management.

Q.

The Rani ki Vav is a world heritage site in Gujarat; a vav which is a stepwell, much like baolis or baoris. Stepwells are water storage systems that were first constructed in the 3rd millennium BC and were subsequently adopted by different dynasties and kingdoms over the centuries. They were designed to make water-storage areas, resembling ponds or wells, accessible by descending flights of steps. The ruins of these stepwells can still be found across the Indian subcontinent, including many parts of Western and Northern India.

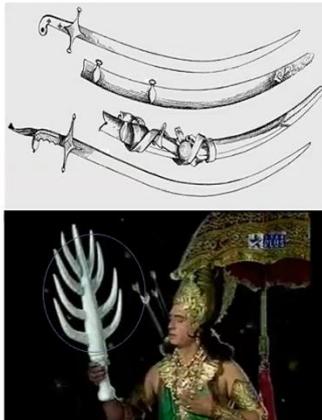

Why is this in focus since last year?

It's a planet. The only green lantern with a biological ecosystem
